Compost Making at Home

Compost is a type of organic material that can be applied to soil to aid in the growth of plants. Food scraps and yard waste account for more than 30% of what we throw away, but they might be composted instead. Composting these materials helps to clear out the landfills, thus avoiding the emission of methane, a powerful greenhouse gas. So to create awareness among the students about the harmful effects of green house gases and to protect our nature, a compost-making event was organized on July 31, 2021. About 38 students participated in the event.
